

To be able to write a 3rd
person narrative.

Warm up task

Tell your partner what we were doing in English last week and what we will be doing this week.

Your first job is to stick your plans in underneath your objective from last week.

Once you have done that, you need to make sure you have responded to any next steps or feedback in your books.

What did we use last week to do or plans?

A diagram of a Story Mountain, which is a mountain shape divided into seven sections for writing a story. The sections are labeled: Settings, Problem, Characters, Build Up, Resolution, Introduction, and Ending. The mountain is colored with a light blue sky, a green base, and a brown peak. The text 'Story Mountain!' is written in large red letters across the center, and 'Story Mountain' is written in a white box at the base.

What is our PAT for our writing this week?

P =

A =

T =

This week we are going to be writing our stories section by section.

Think carefully about this before you answer it...

What part are we going to be writing 1st?

The resolution

Why are we starting with the resolution?

It is the resolution because the introduction, build up and the problem are the same as the Three Little Pigs story.

In our new versions the only parts that we have changed are the Resolution and the Ending.

Let's read through the resolution on my plan to remind me what I have planned to write.

What do I need to do now?

Let's have a go at writing the resolution together using what I have planned with the fourth brother.

Now it is your turn. Read through the resolution on your plans now.

Before you start writing you need to remember...

- Capital letters and full stops
 - To follow your plan
- Coordinating conjunctions to make your sentences more interesting
 - To make your writing engaging
- Paragraphs when you change time, place or what is happening

Before we finish our lesson for today, we need to proof read our work. This means we need to look for any places where we may have made a mistake or missed something and fix it.

- Capital letters and punctuation
- Spellings
- That you haven't missed any words out of your sentences.

To be able to write a 3rd
person narrative.

Day 2 Warm up task

Read through the part of your resolution that you wrote yesterday. Tell your partner what has happened so far in your writing.

What are we currently doing in our English lessons?

We are writing a new version of the Three Little Pigs.

How have we changed the original story?

Your first task today is to read what you have wrote so far of your 3rd person Narrative.

Now that you have read what you have already written, you need to read your plan again so that you know what is going to be happening next.

Now it is your turn. Read through the resolution on your plans now.

Before you start writing you need to remember...

- Capital letters and full stops
 - To follow your plan
- Coordinating conjunctions to make your sentences more interesting
 - To make your writing engaging
- Paragraphs when you change time, place or what is happening

What comes next in our 3rd person narratives?

The Ending

What normally happens in the ending of a story?

It is the end of the story where everything is finished. The problem is solved and in a fairy tale they normally live happily ever after.

Let's read my plan to see what happens in my ending.

Now I need to use my plan to write the ending to my story.

Make sure that I follow my plan, but that I am not just copying it. I need to make sure it is engaging for the reader and it shows how brilliant I am at writing!

Now it is your turn. Read through the ending on your plans now.
