Living in the Wider World | Respecting Rights

Respecting Others

Aim

- I can show respect for the rights of others and understand why this is important.

Success Criteria

- I understand that all people have the same rights.
- I can explain what respect means.
- I can decide if people's rights are being respected or not.
- I can think about how people might feel if their rights are not respected.

The Big Questions

What could happen if we didn't show respect for the rights of others?

How can we show respect for the rights of others?

We All Share the Same Rights

Human beings are all different.
This makes the world an exciting and wonderful place to live!

Human rights show that every person in the whole world is important.

Human rights help make the world a better place.
They help people to be treated fairly and to have what they need to be happy and healthy.

A right is something that every person should have because they are a human being.

All people, no matter who they are or where they are in the world, have the same human rights.

With a partner, think of one right that all people share.
Then, when asked, share your idea with the class.

We All Share the Same Rights

There are lots of rights that all people share.
All people have the right to:

be who they want to be.

feel valued;

be safe;

be treated fairly;

be treated with
kindness and respect;

leave their country if
they are not safe;

Respect

What does
'respect' mean?

Respect means you think carefully about the feelings, wishes and rights of others.

Showing respect for others is important – it helps them feel safe, happy loved and cared for.

Share your ideas with the class.

You show respect through the choices you make, the way you behave and the things that you say.

Respecting the Rights of Others

Respecting the Rights of Others

Print and cut one set of picture cards per group. Sort the picture cards into two different groups – those that show the rights of people being respected and those that don't.

The worksheet contains eight picture cards arranged in a 2x4 grid, each enclosed in a blue border. The cards depict the following scenes: 1. Four children standing in a line. 2. Two girls, one pushing the other. 3. An adult hugging a child. 4. An adult kneeling to talk to a child. 5. Two children talking. 6. Two girls, one pointing at the other. 7. A group of children sitting on the grass. 8. A large group of diverse children standing together.

With your group, sort the picture cards into two different groups – those that show the rights of people being respected and those that don't.

Afterwards, share your thoughts with the class.

Respecting the Rights of Others

We can let people be who they want to be and not make fun of them or laugh at them.

We can include everyone.

We can listen to everybody's thoughts and ideas.

We can show respect for the rights of others in lots of ways.

We can be kind to everyone.

We can take time to show care and love to others.

We can take time to learn about and learn from people who are different from us.

We can help people who are sad, lonely or frightened.

Respecting the Rights of Others

Can you think of any other ways to show respect for the rights of others?

Consolidating

Reflecting

A cartoon illustration of two children sitting back-to-back on a light blue surface. The child on the left has long, curly brown hair and is wearing an orange and white striped shirt. The child on the right has short, spiky blonde hair and is wearing a white t-shirt with green trim on the sleeves. Both children are holding open books and appear to be reading. The background is a solid light blue.

Draw a picture that shows someone's rights being respected. Then, write a sentence to explain why it is important to be respectful of the rights of others.

It is important to respect the rights of others because...

Rights without Respect

Showing respect for the rights of others is important – it helps all people to feel safe, loved and cared for. It can help all people feel happy inside.

How do you think people feel when their rights aren't respected?

Take a moment of quiet to think about this and then share your thoughts with the class.

When people's rights are not respected, they can feel sad, angry, lonely and frightened. These feelings can lead to people falling out with each other.

Rights without Respect

There are people all over the world working really hard to make sure that people's rights are respected. We can do our bit by respecting the rights of others in school and in our local community.

Let's be a rights-respecting class and help others feel happy on the inside!
